

THE SPECTATOR

A Local Girl's Marriage---and How Her Father Feels About It

Saturday of next week will be the nineteenth of June and it was on that date, exactly a generation ago, that her grandmother died. To some that might be a reason for having the wedding on another day, but that's not at all how the lady in Heaven would wish it. Sure, she would declare that the grandest time to begin the new life would be the very anniversary of the end of her own earthly span. 'Tis a symbol, she would say, of God's plan for the young to start where the old had stopped and one can be convinced that her benign influence with the celestial choir (long since unquestioned) will assert itself, to those who have ears to hear, when the couple approach to the Lohengrin strains of Katherine Rowan's organ.

Yes, that's the way it will occur (it's amazing how certain one can be), for the sainted one knows, from her well-earned coin of eternal vantage, that there is much to commend in this good girl who is the branch of her tree and who, in all the years of her life, has evoked a great love from those whose environments she has entered and who have yet to hear her say an unkind or inconsiderate thing about anybody in the whole wide world.

Her natural affection is a diffusing thing and her concern for others knows no bounds. When illness came to this father, more than a year ago, her solicitude was so gentle and so sweet, and so effective, as to make his travail worth all its pain if only to be her beneficiary, for such devotion is seldom of this earth and gratitude surges because of it.

When the wedding day comes he will accompany her up the aisle, to give her to a younger and most worthy man, and he will not be estopped even if his doctor, to whom he owes a great debt, asserts a thousand times that he should refrain from such a venture. No, that he will do, and in a brand-new Hickey-Freeman suit, for he has no funeral attire and hired habilitations are assuredly no part of a journey of this distinguished order. Besides, what further use would he have for that sort of somber regalia and why should he invest in it when the same sum will buy another good rug for the precious pair or perhaps some device that will take the dishes right off their table, wash and dry them and land them in the locker, without anyone turning a hand, if one is to believe all one hears about modern gadgetry.

So, then, sartorial orthodoxy will thus be violated when the marital march is made, but the solecism will serve to center attention better on the frock of the bride, for truly it is a beautiful thing, a fitting garment indeed for the beloved that adorns it, and it is really something you all must see.

That many will come to the church ceremony is an earnest wish, and without need of special bid, for here we have lived for more than 30 years, and while a querulous note is struck from time to time in this department, good will for our neighbors is woven withal of primest wool, and they will be most welcome in our company.

Surely the Burgess and his lady should be there and also those who form the pattern of the town's activities, perhaps Al Nulty with his fine firemen, Tom Merkle and his capable corps, the Legion, the Auxiliary and all others to whom these greetings come, for there's plenty of room in our big little church.

No, this is not promiscuous, but merely the natural urge of a man's heart to share with others whose lives he has touched a great joy, a deserved tribute to a devoted daughter in whom he is well-pleased, and who fondly merits all the acclaim a proud father seeks in her behalf.

And let there be no misgivings about coming to a Catholic edifice, for there is a great deal that is impressive about the half-hour nuptial, with the congregation standing from time to time, and at other times those who wish to kneel may do so... and if they do let them say a little prayer that soft winds will blow as the newly-weds take sail on matrimony's uncharted sea, for better or for worse, for richer or for poorer, in sickness or in health, and until Death doth them part.

College Whirl

Dear Bob:

Since I knew you're too busy studying for exams to write, I'll give you a bit of news about what is happening at home.

Newbold Smith graduated from Annapolis last week, and before his graduation he was presented with the Naval Academy Athletic Association binoculars for excellence in general athletics. Newbold is said to be the first athlete in recent Naval Academy history to win ten varsity letters. He won four letters in track, three as a tackle on the football team, and three on the wrestling team. He lost only one match in dual meet wrestling competition.

And another local athlete, Greer Heindel, has been honored by election to Phi Kappa Beta, a junior society at the University of Pennsylvania. Greer starred on the basketball team at Penn.

Lawrence Doyle has not only closed his career at Penn State in a blaze of glory, but has just been appointed to the United States Air Force, subject to confirmation by the Senate. Larry, who studied commerce and finance at State, was named the outstanding senior cadet of the ROTC there. He was a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Do you know Dick Curtis from Ardmore? He has been awarded a four-year scholarship to Harvard, where he plans to study to be a nuclear physicist. Dick has been a member of the National Honor Society, the Hi-Y, and the crew at Lower Merion. He placed first last year and second in Temple University's annual High School Mathematics Tournament.

I went into the Barclay Monday afternoon for the tea dance at which Sally Kinnerey was presented, and it was certainly as nice a party as I can remember. Sally, who just graduated from Agnes Irwin School, looked out of this world in a gorgeous gown of white lace over a foundation of pink and orange. Sally is going to enter Bennett Junior College in the fall to study costume designing.

Spent most of the party trying to keep cool with Barclay Punch at a table along with Franny Nehrbas, Edie Wells, Emory Klapp, Lars Petersen, Bob Kennedy, Bud Mead and Jim Dolby. The heat stifled even the usual repartee that one expects from that crowd. Chatted with Edith Davis, who was quite embarrassed that she had neglected

Shillingford Gets Assessor Post

Rosemont Man To Succeed Dr. Seidel

J. Harvey Shillingford, of Rosemont, was appointed Lower Merion Township assessor this week to succeed Dr. Charles Seidel, of 916 Old Lancaster Ave., Bryn Mawr, who died two weeks ago.

Shillingford was previously a personal property clerk in the Lower Merion assessor's office. This post will be taken over by Dennis Ryan, of Manor Rd., Wynnewood, who has been serving as an inspector in the township's highway department.

Shillingford's new job pays $2000 a year for the county. However, he will also be retained as a clerk by both the Lower Merion Commissioners and the School District, so that his total salary as assessor will approximate $5600 a year, it was explained. As a personal property clerk, he received $3420 a year from the county.

The county and the township taxing bodies maintain two full-time assessors in Lower Merion. Continuing in office is William H. Decker, 113 Bryn Mawr Ave., Bala-Cynwyd.

Kenealy Warns of Elm Leaf Beetle

Tree Warden Urges Control Measures

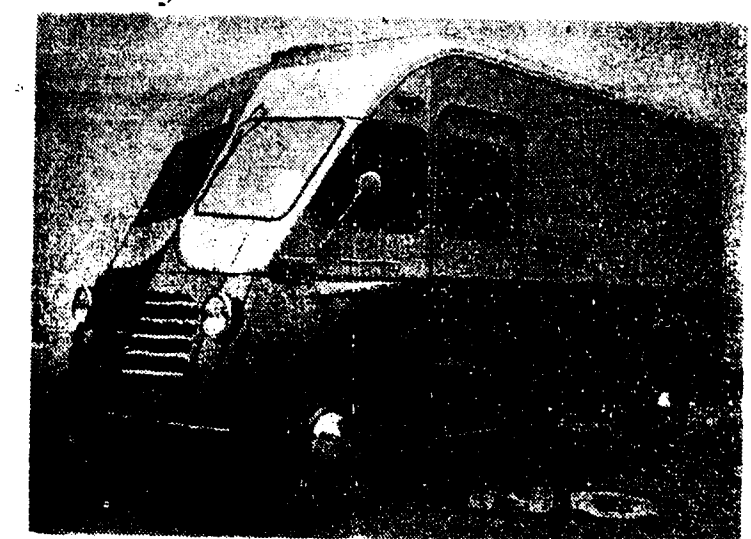

Elm trees in this area are due to receive their annual visit from the Elm Leaf Beetle, J. C. Kenealy, Lower Merion Township tree warden, warned this week, and unless proper control measures are adopted injury to the trees will be serious.

The adult beetle, Kenealy said, is about a quarter of an inch long, dull yellow in color, with black spots on the head. They spend the winter in protected places and in the spring the dull yellow has changed to a light green. They fly to elm trees when the foliage develops and feed, eating irregular holes in the leaves, and from time to time lay yellow eggs on the underside of the leaves, usually about 25 in number and nearly always in two rows, side by side.

The eggs hatch in about a week and the tiny grubs feed for three weeks, working on the underside of the leaf. When full grown, about half an inch long, they crawl down the tree to the trunk and pupate, either in bark crevices or on the ground.

Best control measure, Kenealy said, is to spray the tree with arsenate of lead during early June. Best results, he added, will be obtained if the work is done with a power sprayer.

County's New "Bookmobile"

Arrival of Montgomery County's new "Bookmobile" was announced this week by County Commissioners Fred C. Peters, Foster C. Hillegass and Raymond K. Mensch. The "Bookmobile" will be used as a traveling library and will serve branches to be established throughout the county where library facilities are lacking or where there is need for increased service. Rural sections will benefit largely, while existing local libraries may call upon the library for additional service.

Committee Solicits Contributions To Defray Costs of Traditional Observance Sports and Movies on Day's Program Booths Will Sell Refreshments

Special committees, named to arrange the program for Narberth's annual observance of July Fourth, announced this week that the contract for fireworks had been signed and a special attraction included in the activities planned for the sports program to be held during the day.

Officials of the committee are William P. Davies, general chairman; William S. Howard, evening chairman; Sterling M. Chain, day chairman. The observance this year is scheduled to start at 9:45 A. M., and end with the first burst of fireworks. As in past years, the Narberth Community Playground will be the center of activities.

Fireworks

William S. Howard, chairman of the committee for the fireworks show on July Fourth, stated this week that the contract had been placed for what he believes will be the best and most spectacular display ever witnessed in Narberth. Until the money comes in, the substantial sum involved is a personal commitment of the individual members of the committee who sign the contract, as the Borough itself has nothing to do with the expenditure.

Nor can Chairman Howard deduct it from his income tax return if it comes to pass that he has to pay the big bill out of his own pocket.

It is not expected, however, that the people will be less generous than they have been in other years, and prompt returns are sure to come from the general mailing which was made this week. For the benefit of those who may not have received a letter, it is pointed out that contributions should be made to Carl B. Metzger, Jr., treasurer, at the National Bank of Narberth, and acknowledgment will be made in the columns of OUR TOWN for all subscriptions of $2 and over.

It is understood the merchants plan to give uniform donations of $5 each, as is customary in other communities.

Frank J. Dwyer is secretary of the fireworks committee and the following have been assigned special duties in connection with the event:

Samuel K. Barclay, Burns F. Best, Raymond A. Cabrey, Walter B. Case, Sterling M. Chain, Eugene H. Davis, Fred Dannenhauer, Jr., Joseph L. Kelley, Albert H. Nulty, and George B. Supple.

William P. Davies, member of the Borough Council, is general chairman of the Independence Day observance, which includes many day-time activities as well as the fireworks show in the evening.
